STEPS TAKEN TO PREVENT AND REDUCE SUPPLY CHAIN RISKS

Profound does not tolerate any form of modern slavery, forced labour or child labour in its operations or supply chain. The Company recognizes its responsibility to protect these values and to ensure that it is preventing and addressing these risks within its operations and supply chain that may arise. The Company expects its business partners and suppliers to uphold these same principles within their operations and adhere to applicable human rights and employment standards laws.

Profound welcomes constructive engagement with all stakeholders, including suppliers, governmental authorities and clients, to increase the effectiveness of its modern slavery risk mitigation practices. The Company will continue to adapt to maintain the highest standards of ethics and integrity in its business and relationships.

Activities and Supply Chains

Profound is a commercial-stage medical manufacturing device company focused on the development and marketing of customizable, incision-free therapeutic systems for the image guided ablation of diseased tissue.

Profound's suppliers are crucial partners in the operation and success of its business and Profound expects such suppliers to abide by its standards with respect to modern slavery. Profound communicates these expectations through policies, contracts, and procedures. Profound operates and maintains an approved supplier list and conducts due diligence on all suppliers before allowing them to become an approved supplier. This due diligence may include an audit to ensure that an organization complies with any applicable legal requirements. Direct suppliers of components and materials for Profound are located in Canada, the United States and Finland. Raw materials, parts, and components that Profound procures for direct use in manufacturing are classified as direct. Profound sources over one thousand parts from over one hundred direct suppliers, many of which are available from multiple vendors and some which are single-sourced.

POLICIES AND DUE DILIGENCE

There are several policies, processes, and practices that the Company uses to minimize the risk of forced labour or child labour practices in the Company's supply chains.

Policies

The Company is committed to conducting its business and affairs with honesty, integrity and in accordance with high ethical and legal standards. Profound's Code of Business Conduct and Ethics (the "Code") provides a set of ethical standards by which each employee, consultant, contractor, officer and director of the Company and all its subsidiaries is required to conduct his or her business, which includes compliance with all applicable laws, rules and regulations of the countries and jurisdictions in which the Company conducts its business.

The Company continues taking a risk-based approach to combatting forced labour and child labour. During the Company's 2024 financial year, it focused on implementing policies, supply chain monitoring, upskilling staff, assessing risks and investing in internal and external resources. Profound continues to assess the factors, sectors and geographies in which it operates to determine whether they may cause, contribute to, or directly link the Company's operations or supply chains to instances of forced labour or child labour. Profound's close working relationships with its Tier 1 Suppliers provides Profound with visibility to assess the risks of forced labour or child labour in its direct supply chain. However, there may be high risk factors and sectors within the Company's broader supply chain that may pose higher risks of modern slavery. A "Tier 1 Supplier" is a supplier with whom Profound has a direct relationship.

Due Diligence

Internally, the Company has reviewed its hiring and manufacturing practices and determined there is no internal risk of forced labour or child labour. Externally, the Company has identified overseas suppliers as having a heightened risk of the potential for the use of forced labour and child labour.

Profound, working with its suppliers, reviews its suppliers' forced labour and child labour risks to ensure there are no current issues. In order to build out an effective reporting process during the Company's 2024 financial year, Profound continued to assess its business and its supply chains for forced labour and child labour risks, reviewed and monitored its own and its suppliers' policies and procedures to address forced labour and child labour risks in the supply chain, implemented the Company's revised supplier due diligence process, including a process for remedying any identified instances of child labour or forced labour and increased communication and transparency with each of its suppliers.

SUPPLY CHAIN RISKS

Profound recognizes that the nature and location of its operations means that the risks of forced labour or child labour practices in its supply chains are relatively low. Similarly, Profound's risk of involvement in modern slavery practices by its suppliers is considered relatively low, as assessed by the Company's review of suppliers' evaluations of their own modern slavery risks and the Company's understanding of its suppliers' operations. Nonetheless, Profound remains committed to taking steps to identify and address potential incidents of forced labour or child labour in its supply chains.

Profound's suppliers are reputable and well-known, go through an approval process and are located in either the USA or Europe, which are jurisdictions with high standards of protection for employees and the rights of individuals and do not pose a high degree of risk of forced labour or child labour practices. The Company currently relies on single source suppliers for the components used in its systems. In connection with Profound's manufacturing processes, it intends to procure alternative supply arrangements for these components as required.

REMEDATION MEASURES

Profound is evaluating industry best practices and internal processes and will diligently take all appropriate remediation measures, as required. To date, there have been no identified or reported instances of forced labour or child labour in Profound's activities and supply chain, therefore, Profound has not had to take any remediation measures.

LOSS OF INCOME

Profound recognizes that efforts to prevent and reduce the risks of forced labour and child labour can have the unintended consequence of contributing to a loss of income for the most vulnerable families. Profound is not aware of any instance to date where its efforts to mitigate the risk of forced labour or child labour in its activities and supply chains may have contributed to a loss of income for vulnerable families.

TRAINING

Profound assigns mandatory training to employees, using a risk-based approach, for completion through its online learning management system, and such online learning system is also made available to all employees. Profound has created new mandatory training for all new hire employees, which includes general training and awareness initiatives regarding modern slavery risks, ethical sourcing and human rights as they relate to Profound's operations and supply chain.

EFFECTIVENESS ASSESSMENT

The due diligence processes described above provide a method of managing the risks; however, the Company will continue to look at ways to enhance its capability to identify any risks indicators within its supply chains and its capability to investigate and address any concerns.

Profound will continue to review its approach and continuously improve its processes to respond to the risks of forced labour or child labour in its supply chains. The Company has not received any complaints of any modern slavery issues or notifications from its suppliers of identification of modern slavery practices.
